

THE HENRY A. KISSINGER CENTER
FOR GLOBAL AFFAIRS PRESENTS

CRISIS SIMULATION

Arctic Security and the Race for Strategic Advantage

About this Event

The Arctic region is opening.

Great powers seek advantage in this region for economic benefit, security, governance, and control. This half-day exercise simulates a significant US-Russian crisis that explores the dark world of intelligence, the fragility of international agreements, and the almost ruthless quest for advantage. Students will serve as National Security Council members and staff; they will immerse themselves in the military, legal, media, intelligence, and policy realms to diagnose a flash crisis and then find a way out.

Event Details

Professors

Hal Brands - John Hopkins SAIS
Timothy Nichols - Duke University

When

Saturday, December 2, 2023
10:00 am - 2:30 pm EST
A working lunch will be provided

Where

555 Pennsylvania Avenue NW,
Washington, DC, 20001

CLICK HERE TO RSVP

Registration will close at 5:00 pm on November 9, 2023